and will certainly continue to be small claims in favor of the Government resulting from automotive accidents. When the case is apparently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saw no objection to our processing the claim and attempting to secure a recovery of the cost. No arbitrary monetary ceiling was established, but the advisability of action by this Agency alone will be left to our discretion. If the case presents any question on the actual amount of damages involved, or if a negotiated settlement appears implausible, the case will be forwarded to the General Accounting Office for collection and possible negotiation by Justice. Copies to: Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.			STAT
Office of the General Counsel Tort Claims in Favor of the Government 1. Tort claims against the Government are regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act. There is no specific provision, however, in the statutes or appropriate opinions of the Comptroller General in regard to collection of tort claims in favor of the Government by agencies other than GAO or Justice. 2. The problem of handling tort claims that seems to be clearly in favor of the Government was discussed today with of favor of the Government was discussed today with office. There have occasionally been and will certainly continue to be small claims in favor of the Government resulting from automotive accidents. When the case is apparently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saymently in our favor and the damages involved, or if a negotiated saymently in our favor and the damages involved, or if a negotiated saymently in our favor and the damages involved, or if a negotiated saymently in our favor and the damages involved, or if a negotiated by Justice.	Approved For Release 2003/08	/05 : CIA-RDP78-04914A000200050040-7
Office of the General Counsel Tort Claims in Favor of the Government 1. Tort claims against the Government are regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act. There is no specific provision, however, in the statutes or appropriate opinions of the Comptroller General in regard to collection of tort claims in favor of the Government by agencies other than GAO or Justice. 2. The problem of handling tort claims that seems to be clearly in favor of the Government was discussed today with office of the Comptroller General's office. There have occasionally been and will certainly continue to be small claims in favor of the Government resulting from automotive accidents. When the case is apparently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. samparently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saturation of the cost. No arbitrary monetary ceiling was setablished, but the advisability of action by this Agency alone will be left to our discretion. If the case presents any question on the actual amount of damages involved, or if a negotiated settlement appears implausible, the case will be forwarded to the inernal Accounting Office for collection and possible negotiation by Justice. Copies to: Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.		6 Amount 2040
Office of the General Counsel Tort Claims in Favor of the Government 1. Tort claims against the Government are regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act. There is no specific provision, however, in the statutes or appropriate opinions of the Comptroller General in regard to collection of tort claims in favor of the Government by agencies other than GAO or Justice. 2. The problem of handling tort claims that seems to be clearly in favor of the Government was discussed today with of the Comptroller General's office. There have occasionally been and will certainly continue to be small claims in favor of the Government resulting from automotive accidents. When the case is apparently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. saw no objection to our processing the claim and attempting to secure a recovery of the cost. No arbitrary monetary ceiling was established, but the advisability of action by this Agency alone will be left to our discretion. If the case presents any question on the actual amount of damages involved, or if a negotiated settlement appears implausible, the case will be forwarded to the contained accounting Office for collection and possible negotiation by Justice. Copies to: Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.		o August 1948
1. Tort claims against the Government are regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act. There is no specific provision, however, in the statutes or appropriate opinions of the Comptroller General in regard to collection of tort claims in favor of the Government by agencies other than GAO or Justice. 2. The problem of handling tort claims that seems to be clearly in favor of the Government was discussed today with of some of the Comptroller General's office. There have occasionally been and will certainly continue to be small claims in favor of the Government resulting from automotive accidents. When the case is apparently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. set apparently in our favor, and the damages are claim and attempting to secure a recovery of the cost. No arbitrary monetary ceiling was established, but the advisability of action by this Agency alone will be left to our discretion. If the case presents any question on the actual amount of damages involved, or if a negotiated settlement appears implausible, the case will be forwarded to the inneral Accounting Office for collection and possible negotiation by Justice. ST Copies to: Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.	Files
1. Tort claims against the Government are regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act. There is no specific provision, however, in the statutes or appropriate opinions of the Comptroller General in regard to collection of tort claims in favor of the Government by agencies other than GAO or Justice. 2. The problem of handling tort claims that seems to be clearly in favor of the Government was discussed today with of the Comptroller General's office. There have occasionally been and will certainly continue to be small claims in favor of the Government resulting from automotive accidents. When the case is apparently in our favor, and the damages are liquidated, Mr. says and objection to our processing the claim and attempting to secure a recovery of the cost. No arbitrary monetary ceiling was established, but the advisability of action by this Agency alone will be left to our discretion. If the case presents any question on the actual amount of damages involved, or if a negotiated sentlement appears implausible, the case will be forwarded to the seneral Accounting Office for collection and possible negotiation by Justice. Copies to: Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.	Office of the General Coun	sel in the statutes or appropriate opinions of the Comptroller General in regard to collection of tort claims in favor of the Government by agencies other than GAO or Justice. 2. The problem of handling tort claims that seems to be clearly in favor of the Government was discussed today with	Tort Claims in Favor of th	e Government
Copies to: Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.	in the statutes or appropriate regard to collection of by agencies other than GAO 2. The problem of har in favor of the Government the Comptroller General's cand will certainly continue Government resulting from a apparently in our favor, an saw no objection to secure a recovery of the established, but the advisa will be left to our discretion the actual amount of dam settlement appears implausing the settleme	iate opinions of the Comptroller General tort claims in favor of the Government or Justice. Inding tort claims that seems to be clearly was discussed today with of office. There have occasionally been extended to be a small claims in favor of the automotive accidents. When the case is not the damages are liquidated, Mr. to our processing the claim and attempting cost. No arbitrary monetary ceiling was bility of action by this Agency alone cion. If the case presents any question ages involved, or if a negotiated ble the case will be the case will be the case will be a second of the comptrol of the case presents any question ages involved, or if a negotiated	STAT
Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.			STAT
Chief, Budget and Fin. Br. Chief, Services Br.
fo che	Chief, Budget and Fin. F	3r _o	STAT
fo che			SIAI
Jo Char
			o clause
/ / · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·		- Larger V

Approved For Release 2003/08/05 : CIA-RDP78-04914A000200050040-7

STAT